Acclaim for city's Suzanne

LIMERICK-BORN soprano Suzanne Murphy, who will give two concerts in the city next week, has received rave reviews for her latest starring role in Lucia di Lammermoor in Cardiff.

The former We-4 singer is now very much in demand in Britain and the organisers of her Limerick shows are indeed fortunate to have secured her services.

Her demanding role in Lucia for the Welsh National Opera is likely to win her even more lucrative contracts.

Suzanne's current season takes her through to Christmas and she will play Liverpool, Manchester, Cardiff, Bristol and Oxford.

The Times, Paul Griffiths had this to say about her latest performance:

Latest

"Suzanne Murphy gives an astonishing performance as the heroine. She sings from the start with a balanced, almost vibrato-less tone, which suggests instability of mind but which demands great stability of pitching: there is no room for accidents on these exposed, glacial slopes of singing. Miss Murphy does not put a foot wrong. She throws her voice nakedly and daringly into the role, and is rewarded with a great personal success".

And in the Guardian, Rodney Milnes had this to say:

"Suzanne Murphy is no tinkly nightingale of a Lucia. Her lyric soprano is sumptuous of tone yet ideally fluent in coloratura—I know of few sopranos today who can sing a fast chromatic scale with such devastating accuracy. She conquered a tendency towards flat orientated pitch in time for the Mad Scene, which went spectacularly well.

"As we know from her Puritani, Miss Murphy is an expert in stage madness, but here she played her trump cards a little too soon. She gives a full blooded performance".

The latest news on the Limerick concert is that there are still a few seats available for November 2. Advance booking facilities are available at Clancy's in O'Connell Street.

Because of her heavy commitments it is unlikely that Miss Murphy will again be in a position to play in her native city for a long time to come.

Music lovers from all over Ireland are travelling for her two concerts next week. The advice is to book now as there is likely to be a rush on the few remaining tickets over the next few days.
