Poltergeist 2— The Other Side

POLTERGEIST 2—The Other Side is Brian "must" for those who enjoyed the Tobe 1982 movie, which was Spielberg produced. The film has the family clinging to- constantly reaffirming their "lurv," while he attacks them and demons try to kidnap pol-Anne.

The first ten minutes are side-splitting funny, though it's not meant to be this way.

HITCHERS — a duel without cars across a desert between ruthless Rutger Hauer and Thomas Howell.

AWAY TRAIN — an exciting prison drama co-starring Jon Voight and Eric

● Suzanne Murphy's triumphant return to her native Limerick last Friday provided a Celebrity Concert which will be long remembered by those privileged to hear her.

● Following more than ten years of operatic successes abroad, particularly with the Welsh National Opera, it was an evening of sheer enjoyment and nostalgia.

● The diva had come home.

● The crowded Crescent Theatre gave her a memorable reception — and she responded with singing that gave full scope to her attractive tonal quality and exciting delivery.

● She seemed to relax after the thunderous applause which greeted her first appearance on stage; she knew she was surrounded by friends and admirers, and was generous with a programme which included arias from Puccini, and works by Lehar, Stanford, Lambert, etc.

● Her concerts have taken her all over Europe but I am sure she will long remember with affection the night she returned home to sing in the Crescent Theatre where many years ago she was a member of the Cecilian Musical Society.

The Cecilians

● The Cecilian Musical Society will present "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" at the Crescent Theatre for ten nights from Friday, November 7th.

● This is a presentation which is eagerly awaited by local theatregoers who will have the privilege of viewing the Irish premiere stage presentation.

● Those who have fond memories of the film will know what to expect from this exhilarating show. It boasts some of the most exciting dancing sequences ever staged.

● Among the large and talented cast will be Brian and David Griffin, sons of former chairman of the society, the late Jimmy Griffin. Their mother, the former Kay Hanrahan, is a stalwart of the Society for more years than she would care to remember. She still gives her time, talent and skills to the make-up department of the society.

● This musical will be the third to play in this city in
