R.I.C. AND THE BLACK AND TANS

By WILLIE W. GLEESON

IN CONNECTION with the picture, titled "The Black and Tans Playing Hoodoo" (page 1, column 1), my name may have been altered from "Glenmore (now called Glenelg)" - but the word "Tans" in the picture was not altered. My name is William J. Gleeson.

Letter

Before proceeding further, I must state that, while I am not a "Limerickonian" by any means, I am of the opinion that the description of the picture is quite accurate. The picture is of a group of men, presumably members of the Black and Tans, playing a game of hoodoo in a public place. The scene is set in a typical Irish pub, with men dressed in period clothing, including caps and suits. The atmosphere is one of merriment and enjoyment, with men engaged in conversation and laughter.

Some of the Black and Tans in the picture are wearing typical Irish caps, including the "Black Cap" and the "Tans" cap. The picture is a good representation of the everyday life of the men of the Black and Tans, who were responsible for maintaining law and order in Ireland during the period of the Black and Tans. The picture is a valuable representation of the history of Ireland during that time, and I consider it to be a valuable addition to the collection of historical images.

COMMUNITY WORKSHOP FOR WEST LIMERICK

By PATRICIA M. DUNNE

PLANS for the establishment of a community workshop for men in the city of Limerick have been announced by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The project, which will be initiated by a group of local businessmen, will provide a facility for men to learn new skills and develop their interests. The workshop will be a place where men can come together to learn new techniques and share their knowledge with each other.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce has been working closely with local businesses to ensure that the workshop will meet the needs of the community. The project is expected to be a valuable addition to the city's facilities, providing a resource for men who want to learn new skills and develop their interests.

The workshop will be located in a convenient area of the city, with easy access to public transport. The facility will be well-equipped with the latest equipment, ensuring that men can learn new skills in a safe and supportive environment.
