The War of Independence followed, and the Black and Tans, men of я horrible cruelty, were at the forefront of the action. We shall remember the day of February 13, 1922, when the Black and Tans rampaged around the Irish countryside in Crossley tenders and armoured cars, right.

The men of the Black and Tans were among the first to attack. They smashed windows, burned houses, and rounded up civilians. The Black and Tans were not only soldiers, but also criminals. Their actions were inspired by their hatred for the Irish Republican Army, and their desire to maintain British rule.

The Black and Tans were led by a man named Sean Finn. Sean Finn was a well-known figure in Limerick, and he was known for his cruelty and savagery. He was a man of great intelligence, but he was also a man of great brutality. He was a man who was willing to do whatever it took to achieve his goals.

Sean Finn was a man of great influence in Limerick. He was a man who was able to influence the local politicians, and he was able to influence the local community. He was a man who was able to influence the men of the Black and Tans, and he was able to influence the men of the IRA. He was a man who was able to influence the men of the Black and Tans to do whatever it took to achieve their goals.

The Black and Tans were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals. They were not only soldiers, but also criminals.
