OUR COUNTRY COLUMN NOTES ON DAIRY COWS. OO LIMERICK FARMERS' ASSOCIATION.

There have recently been some indications of a movement towards co-operation between the farmer and the labourer. It is only by pulling together that farming as an industry can ever hope to be properly represented in the House of Commons. Members who are elected largely by the votes of agricultural workers but who promptly put on the uniform of the Socialist party are of no use either to the agricultural worker or to the farmer. When it comes to a vote, they vote with the other members of the Socialist group, and the interest of workers in the country count as nothing against the interest of the town worker—which, it must never be forgotten, are absolutely at variance.

Finger-and-toe disease in roots is caused by a fungus that thrives in acid soils. It can be cured by the use of lime, and land is kept alkaline naturally by the presence of carbonate of lime. It is not easy to eradicate the disease all at once. The application of superphosphate to the soil must be avoided, as it is acid, but basic slag can be used freely, as it is alkaline. Also, either burnt lime or ground carbonate of lime should be applied whenever possible.

To the sheep-owner and cattle-grazier in many parts of this country the presence of bracken involves an enormous loss. There are in England and Wales, not to mention Scotland, tens of thousands of acres which are smothered under this redundant fern, and it is not the poorest pastures which are usually thus impoverished, but generally those sheep walks which lie mid-way between the low-lying fields and the heights well above the tree-line. The most practical way of destroying bracken seems to be by cutting, but it is not of the slightest use mowing when the fern is fully grown, for it will come up again the following year as strong as ever. Cutting must be done first in May, and again about two months later; that is the fern must be destroyed when it is crisp and tender, before the fronds have spread. If this treatment is pursued methodically for two or three seasons, the pest will be finally eradicated.

The best means of exterminating the weed known as yellow-rattle, which is to be most frequently found on poor, badly-drained lands, is undoubtedly timely mowing. On some of the hill-side farms of North Wales hayfields have been practically dominated by this weed, owing to the fact that, as mowing does not usually take place in that part until quite late in the summer, the plant is able to ripen and sow its seeds in preparation for the following year's crop.

The efficiency of a tractor on land depends to a great extent on the wheel being fitted with the type of spade, strakes or cleats most suitable to the occasion. For the greater part of its work in hauling loads the tractor moves over loose soil, or soil held together by stubble or grass, and under such conditions it is subject to wheel-slip, with consequent loss of tractive effort. Many devices have been tried and adopted to counter the difficulties encountered in this direction. As familiar instances of indirect wheels, the four-wheel drive tractor may be mentioned. But ultimately whatever innovation in design or construction of such machines, the tractor must obtain a grip upon the soil.

A form of gastritis has been a very common cause of mortality among chickens of late years, and in many cases the complaint has been traced to some injurious element in the dry-food. But over-stimulation and over-feeding will bring about the same result, namely—an inability to stand, a rocking motion, and finally death. There are more chickens killed by "coddling" than by "roughing it."

One more testimony to the importance of milk recording is given by the performance of a dairy shorthorn cow belonging to a member of the Surrey Milk Recording Association. This is the first cow of the breed which has been known to yield 2,000 gallons of milk in one lactation; how many heavy milkers or their progeny have found their way to the butchers block instead of serving to strengthen the herds of this country as they might have done if a record had been kept to show their real value? In spite of the growth of the recording movement in recent years, such a thing is doubtless still occurring, but it is to be hoped that it will become less and less frequent as time goes on.

The present is an opportune time to consider the various aspects of sheep-dipping, more especially the most suitable dips to use. The effectiveness of a dip is the first point to be considered. For the cure of scab it has to be strong enough to kill the scab mite, or even the unattached mite in its shell. Drugs of sufficient strength for this purpose can be easily found, but the sheep and its fleeces must not be injured. A proper balance of mite-killing properties has, therefore, to be maintained between the number of times animals are to be dipped and the non-injurious effects upon the sheep's skin and even life. A weak dip which kills most of the mite population in a short space at the first dipping, but which is ineffective against the eggs, would complete the process at a second—that is, after approximately ten to dipping if applied after the eggs had hatched, and before fresh ones were laid fourteen days.

Tomatoes are now so popular that more effort should be made to grow them than is commonly the case. Where a glass house is available, there is, of course, no trouble in the matter, and even out of doors there is a fair prospect of success. Sometimes we get hardly enough sun to ripen the fruits properly, but much more can be done in this way if proper precautions are taken. The first essential is to raise or buy well-grown, sturdy plants of the right variety. The ground for tomatoes should be in fairly good condition. Strong, healthy growth is necessary, but over-maturing means rank growth and liability to disease, besides delaying the ripening of the fruits. A fairly good dressing of dung may be given, and basic slag should also be applied at the rate of 4 lb. per square rod.

With reference to the statement frequently made that farmers are subsidised by the State, a correspondent asks whether it is not a fact that the wheat-growing portion of the farming community has been subsidising the nation to the extent of many millions for some years past, through being forced by the Government to sell their wheat at a price below its proper market value. He suggests that if this is correct the time has arrived for the National Farmers' Union to prepare figures showing the millions per annum lost to farmers by the compulsory sale of wheat at an artificial price much below market value.

The first milk drawn from the cow contains only a low percentage of fat, sometimes not more than one per cent., while the strippings may contain as high as 19 per cent. of fat. This emphasises the importance of obtaining all the milk which is secreted. The adoption of the Hegland method of milking generally increases both the quantity of milk obtained and the percentage of fat content. In a trial herd the yield of milk increased 44 per cent., and, on the average, the increase of fat was over 9 per cent. The method has been described in the following words by Dr. E. V. Wilcox:—"The right quarters of the udder are pressed together by the two hands, the thumbs being held in the outside of the udder and the index fingers in the division between the two halves of the right side. In producing pressure with the hands a slight upward motion is also given to the udder. This motion is repeated three or four times, after which all the milk in the milk cistern is removed, and the manipulation is repeated on the same teat being, of course, given to the right and left sides. Following upon this, the two front quarters and the hind quarters are treated similarly, and finally the teats of the four quarters are manipulated so as to secure all the milk which has been secreted at the time of milking."

The large increase in milk fat thus obtained is obviously due to this method of milking, securing the largest possible quantity of the milk in the milk cistern, and the manipulation is repeated on the same teat being, of course, given to the right and left sides. Following upon this, the two front quarters and the hind quarters are treated similarly, and finally the teats of the four quarters are manipulated so as to secure all the milk which has been secreted at the time of milking. HOMER HINTS.

To keep sausages from bursting, roll them in flour before frying.

Corks may be made airtight and watertight by keeping them immersed in oil for five minutes.

Some vinegar placed in the rinsing water on washing day will prevent the hands from becoming rough and chapped.

A little salt should be added to the sugar used for cooking fruit. It improves the flavour, and rather less sugar is required.

Coal-burners have a knack of disappearing out of sight and getting in between the coals. A good plan is to paint the handle white and hang it on a nail near the door.

Linens may be marked very easily if it is dipped in cold starch and allowed to dry before applying the ink. The pen will not smudge if this is done.

Oil-cans should be tightly corked, as paraffin exposed to the air will not burn brightly and will form a crust on the wick after being lighted.

Enamel baths can be thoroughly cleaned with a flannel dipped in paraffin. They should not be scrubbed with soap, as this cracks the enamel.

Always use a little lime when scrubbing table tops or boards of any description. This keeps them very white. It also keeps away all insects and vermin which often get into boards.

To prevent clothes from becoming streaky and patchy in the process of bleaching, add a cupful of milk to the water before putting in the clothes.

Instead of using an iron-stand of iron or wire, try a piece of firebrick. This helps to keep the iron hot, so that change of iron need not be so frequent, and thus there will be a saving of valuable time.

Pressing Silk.—Always press silk under a piece of muslin to prevent the silk from becoming hard and crackly. First damp the muslin, and use a moderately hot iron till the muslin is quite dry.

Storing Winter Clothes.—Moths hate newspapers; they will never touch anything wrapped in them. Wrap winter clothes entirely in newspaper before putting them away for the summer; it will keep them absolutely free of moth.

To Cement Broken China.—Beat a little lime to the finest powder, sift it through fine muslin, and the some in a muslin bag. Rub the edges of a broken china with white of egg, then dust quickly with the lime and unite exactly. It will soon dry, and the break will be imperceptible.

Washing a Cottons Line.—When a cotton clothes-line becomes too dirty, hang white clothes on it, wind it around the back of a kitchen chair. Tie in several places with white cord, the skein which is thus formed; slip it off the chair, and put into a pan of cold water softened with soap-suds. Place the pan on the stove to boil. Stir the clothes line about occasionally, and when the dirt has been boiled out rinse in several waters, place the skein once more around the chair-back, and set it in the sun to dry. It will not be limited or tangled.

To Economise Butter.—Mix and beat up together for half an hour half a pound of butter (fresh) with half a pint of freshly boiled milk lukewarm. You will find that your half-pound of butter will become nearly one pound of a delicious creamy substance like the best fresh butter.

Polishing Floors.—The polished floor, unless dust has been allowed to collect for several days, need not know the touch of a broom. Rough brooms are apt to impair the lustre or scratch the varnish. In most cases, all that is necessary is to go over the floor with a damp cloth. Of course, frequent applications of a wet cloth may dull the polish easily, and some have found a convenient substitute. It consists of a flannel cap fitted over the straw end of the broom with the fuzz exposed. This is slightly moistened with olive oil or sweet oil. When the dust has been removed, it is glanced lightly over the floor, and certainly improves the lustre.

SOME USEFUL RECIPES.

Fish Soufflé.—The following is a very good recipe for any old fish. Pull the fish into shreds with forks, and season with salt and pepper and a little lemon-juice. Add a teaspoonful of oil, and a small piece of margarine. Stir the mixture well and place in a paty-tin, and then bake in an oven until well browned.

Oatmeal Pudding.—Four ounces of chopped suet, half a pound of oatmeal, two ounces, chopped fine, one teaspoonful of salt, lard, a teaspoonful of pepper. Mix well together, without water, tie rather loosely in a floured cloth, and boil for three hours.

Stewed Rhubarb.—This is very good for children. Wash the stalks, well cut the root part off, allowing the skin (if any) to follow the piece cut off. Cut into three inch pieces, put into a jar, cover with water. A little sugar may be added or a slice of lemon. Cover the jar and set in the oven.

Boiled Bread Pudding.—Soak in cold water any pieces of stale bread, and when these are well soaked pour the water off. Whip the bread up well with a fork, and add one tablespoonful of sugar, the same quantity of flour, half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, and one egg well beaten. Put the whole into a well-greased basin, and boil for one and a half hours. The water must not come above the basin. Serve with margarine and a little sugar.

Royal Apple Tart.—For this you will require rough puff-pastry, two eggs, half a pint of milk, half a pint of apple sauce, apricot jam (or red currant jelly). Line a pie-dish with the pastry, and bake it until nicely browned, also some straws of pastry for top. Remove the pie-dish, and place a layer of apple sauce in the bottom, and then a layer of apricot jam and then the cold custard on top. Place the strips of pastry over the custard, and place the dish in the oven to get hot through, and serve.

CYNICAL SAYINGS.

The man who courts trouble is soon married.

After it is all over a man wonders why he worried.

It is difficult for a man with a boat-rocking wife to paddle his own canoe.

Fully two-thirds of a college education is more ornamental than useful.

Of course the man who thinks as much of himself as we do of ourselves is conceited.

The love of the mosquito for a bare arm is surpassed only by the love of a fly for a bare nose.

Truth is stranger than fiction to most people probably because they don't care for an introduction.

Poor reputations are due to the fact that good intentions are seldom credited.

OUR POETS' CORNER

A MESSAGE O'ER THE SEA.

The fields are fair in Erin, the birds are singing gaily,
But O, my heart is waiting for one beyond the sea;
For 'tis only you, avoornen, can stay the silent burning,
Can ease the endless mourning, and set sorrow free.

O, come to me, come home, love, o'er the dreary foam love,
The brighter days shall dawn yet for you and for me;
My heart is always praying my lips are always saying,
"God send you safe to Erin, Avornen, Machree!"

Since we parted, 'choosen, that evening in the boheren,
My days have all been lonely, and sad for want of you;
The songs that used to cheer me, when world-worn and weary,
Come only in my dreaming like a rose 'mid the rue.

O, come to me, come home, love, o'er the dreary foam love,
The brighter days shall dawn yet for you and for me;
My heart is always praying, my lips are always saying,
"God send you safe to Erin, Avornen, Machree!"

The birds are calling sweetly, the winds are bearing fleetly
A message o'er the sea-waves to you, a glad, glad, glad,
To tell of hopes unending, of joys that we'll be sharing,
Of love that lives in Erin, and dear days to be.

O, come to me, come home, love, o'er the dreary foam love,
The brighter days shall dawn yet for you and for me;
My heart is always praying, my lips are always saying,
"God send you safe to Erin, Avornen, Machree!"

THE CAUSE OF ROISIN DUBH.
(Air—"The Reaper of Glanree.")

Ye ask me what I'll sing for ye—'tis easy then to know,
I see in many a face around, the light of youth aglow;
And this shall be my only theme—'tis neither strange nor new,
But earth has not a nobler one—the Cause of Roisin Dubh.

Brave men have toiled and fought for it thro' night eight hundred years,
They faced the power of foreign god combined with foreign spears,
Their blood beddyed the Irish fields, outspread like crimson dew;
They poured it freely for their love—the Cause of Roisin Dubh.

In dungeon and on scaffold tree, their toil was oft repaid
And even in the hour of death they raised their eyes and said—
"Our hearts must turn at first, O God! shore all else to You,
But none of us but one—the Cause of Roisin Dubh."

They speak like fools who say "I'll die," they lie who say "I'm dead,"
And we will place the Freedom Crown—once more on Roisin's head,
What all the years have failed to kill, no man can now subdue;
It must not die, it shall not die—the Cause of Roisin Dubh.

Young men! young maid! O, never cringe beneath the Saxon rod,
Look up to-day! we've work to do, for Roisin and for God,
Come pledge with me your sacred word, to be forever true,
Till victory's sun is shining on the Cause of Roisin Dubh.

BRIAN O'HIGGINS.

AFTER AUGHNIN.

You remember long ago,
Kathleen?
When your lover whispered low,
"Shall I stay or shall I go,
Kathleen?"

And you answered proudly "Go!
And join Jim James and strike a blow
For the Green."

Mavron, your hair is white as snow,
Kathleen;
Your heart is sad and full of woe,
Do you repent you made me go,
Kathleen?

And quick you answer proudly, "No!
For better die with Sarfied so,
Than live a slave without a blow
For the Green."

ARTHUR G. GEOGHEGAN.

"REVENGE FOR IRELAND."

Irish Troops' Outbreak.

A number of soldiers are under detention in connection with Sunday night's riotous scene at Aveley, Sussex, and a strict inquiry is being held, states the "Evening News." The damage done cannot be far short of £1,000. The proprietor of the Old Ship Hotel, in which considerable damage was done, is Mr. A. W. West, and the licensee, Mr. J. W. Connell. "We had thousands of troops in this district during the war," said Mr. Connell, "but nothing like this has ever happened in Aveley before." He could suggest no reason for the attack whatever. Some of the men from Purfleet had used the house, but there had never been any trouble. At the "Crown and Anchor" men forced the door of the jug and bottle department, knocked the tops of spirit bottles and drank the neat spirits. Mrs. Starr stood behind the counter restraining, but in vain. She asked them: "What are you doing this for?" and they replied: "In revenge for good old Ireland, and for last night."

She said: "There are only women here," and one of the men said, "Come on; there's only women." Another said, "We are not going to hurt you; we are going to smash the place up."

They took the contents of the till, about £10, smashed a couple of dozen tumblers, and worked the beer engines, wasting the beer. It is stated that many of the rioters belonged to the Inniskillings and the R.I.F.

Fourteen soldiers were the "Daily Chronicle" says, placed under arrest. The outbreak had its origin in friction between the Inniskillings and the Royal Defence Corps. The Defence Corps has been removed from Purfleet, and the Aveley village has been put out of bounds to prevent further trouble.

RATHKEALE DISTRICT COUNCIL.

At the last meeting of the above-named following vote of condolence was unanimously passed:—"That we, the Rathkeale District Council, do hereby express our deep regret and horror at the sudden and untimely death of Mr. John Wall, Chairman of the Limerick County Council, who was an efficient officer of the I.R.A., and a capable administrator of public affairs. To his sorrowing widow and young son and to Rev. Father Wall, C.C., we tender our heartfelt sympathy in their great affliction."

An application was made by Mr. O'Brien Hishon, asking the Council to remit to give him a passage through the tunnel plot at Clonycloghney, which would be a great convenience. He would give an equal quantity of land on the south side, and carry out all the work in fencing.

Order—Permission granted, the usual consents and traps showing charges to be paid.

On consideration of the list of cottages owing arrears of rent and rates, amounting to £252, it was decided that the Cottage Rent Collector call on the tenants and report to the next meeting the defaulters when drastic measures would be taken to have the amount collected. It was also decided that the list of tenants to the Irish Transport Workers' Union for their co-operation in the matter.

Applications for connection with the Foynes Water Works Scheme were read from Mr. Shanahan and Mr. O'Hagan. Mr. O'Hagan, for a supply of water to his house.

Order—Granted at the rate of 10s. a year, payable in advance, all mains to be made and maintained at the owner's expense.

As only one tender was received for the maintenance contract of the Rathkeale Water Works, it was decided to advertise.

At the Board of Guardians meeting, also held, the Master reported that he had obtained 2 tons of coal from Messrs. Shaw and Co. Askeaton, last week, the supply was now running out, and some provision should be made to keep the fire going in the situation.

Order—That the Master procure some trees to be cut up and used for fuel.

The tender of Mr. J. J. Foran supplying 12 chests of tea at 2s. 6d. a lb. was accepted, being No. 1 sample valued by the tea taster as being the best.

Edward Sheehan, wardman, was allowed his usual outfit of clothing at cost of 25s.

Dr. Nolan, Medical Officer, Shanagolden Dispensary, reported that a boundary fence of the field attached to the Dispensary needed repairs.

It was directed that the vector keep up the fence for his own convenience.

LISTOWEL URBAN COUNCIL.

Mr. D. J. Flavin, chairman, presided. Others present: Messrs. P. Barry and E. J. Gleeson.

A discussion took place of the collection of the rates and water rent when it was given as an instruction from the Council that those outstanding should be collected without further delay as there was no excuse now that the collectors had permission to proceed against defaulters in the ordinary course.

The clerk reported that the ex-service men employed in the council and graveyard took a bank holiday or not, should be decided by the men without the permission of the Council. They should remember that there was a certain amount of the ratepayers' money stuck in the work the ex-service men were performing.

The Chairman said he would wish that they would work with a little more assiduity, too, as the money granted would not last for ever.

The Clerk said there was a considerable amount of the grant already expended in the works.

It was decided that the superintendent of the work, Mr. D. J. McMahon, inform the men that on any future occasion they took a holiday without permission they would not be paid for same.

Mrs. T. J. Walsh wrote complaining of the water supply to her premises, especially for sanitary purposes. Where there was a large staff and no such accommodation the danger could be understood.

Mrs. E. Dalton, Charles St., wrote similarly, complaining of the water supply to her house and others in the same street.

Mr. J. Macaulay, Ballygreagh, wrote stating that, fearing the shortage of water might be due to any fault at the pumping station, he visited the reservoir at 5 o'clock (new time) on Saturday evening and found it contained eight feet of water, and again on Sunday evening, when he found the height of the water to be over ten feet. It would appear that the cause of the trouble was the excessive waste of water after delivery to the town mains, and it was clearly the duty of the Council to take prompt steps to check that, and thereby ensure a reasonable supply of water to the township generally.

After a discussion it was decided to take the necessary steps to check the waste of water throughout the town generally, and to see that there should be no further cause of complaints on the part of consumers.

The Clerk was directed to write to the military authorities in reference to the dangerous portion of overhanging wall at the end of Mr. D. Murphy's house, Church St., which damage was done during the military reprisals on Mr. Flavin's shop next door.

Notices were received of the intention of the following to make claims for the destruction by the military as reprisals of their houses and other injuries:—Mrs. N. Brown, £5,000; Patrick Breen, £200; Mrs. S. Naylor, £200; E. Wilmut, £200; Mary Bunyan, £200; Denis Murphy, £300; Wm. Keane, £200.—Adjourned.

AN ALLEGED SACRILEGE.

Derry Church Incident.

The special correspondent of the "Irish Independent" in Derry states that a painful sensation has been created by an occurrence which is alleged to have taken place on Sunday in St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Clancy's Lane, Derry. It appears, he says, that early in the morning a party of Ulster "Specials" visited the grounds of the church and tore down all bills posted there dealing with the pending election. Shortly afterwards, it is stated, four women in the church were horrified to see an armed man in police uniform emerge from the sacristy and ascend the altar steps. He was smoking at the time, and his conduct led the astonished worshippers to believe that he was under the influence of drink. After a mock display on the altar, he proceeded to open the tabernacle, which he searched.

With an air of insolence he next approached the women, and asked them what they were doing there. He then departed. It is said that no other police were in the vicinity at the time.

DR. MANNIX AT LOURDES

Final Message to Irish People

When Archbishop Mannix arrived in Lourdes on Wednesday he was most warmly received by the Bishop of Tarbes, who expressed great sympathy with him on account of his treatment by the British Government. The venerable prelate—now almost 80 years of age—presented to Dr. Mannix a valuable souvenir of Bernadette, saying: "Give this little present to your mother from me as a little consolation for the cruel privation she has suffered in not being allowed to have her dear son visit her."

Dr. Mannix was the guest of honour at the Bishop's palace on Friday morning. The Bishop of Naur, Belgium, and several dignitaries of the French and Belgian clergy were present to greet him.

A group of Irish pilgrims from Ireland and Great Britain gathered at the Lourdes station on Friday evening to bid a last farewell to the Archbishop and to wish God-speed to him and his two companions, Father Vaughan and Mr. J. Maher.

ARCHBISHOP'S LAST MESSAGE. Dr. Mannix was visibly touched with this last contact with his beloved Irish people, before leaving Europe, and his voice shook as he said to them: "Remember me to all my friends in Ireland, and Great Britain. Tell them that Ireland will surely win, because she will be faithful to her God."

As the train left the crowd knelt on the platform—and few of the Irish who were present can think without emotion of their last view of that tall noble figure with his hand raised to bless them.

Amongst those who were at the train were Mrs. and Miss Johnson, Rathkeale. All the Irish pilgrims assisted on Saturday at Mass, which they specially offered for the safe arrival of Dr. Mannix in Australia.

TRIBUTE TO A GREAT FAMILY. A "Melbourne Tribune" correspondent, writing from Charleville, gives in a recent despatch an interesting account of the birthplace of Archbishop Mannix and his Grace's venerable mother. Mrs. Mannix is described as being as young in spirit, in mind and body as ever she can have been—as erect as the Archbishop on the altar or platform, as gracious in every action, as clear and firm as a rock in every word. She has, he says, the same quiet, business-like, but distinguished manner as the same way of coming to the point, of making a comment, of telling a story.

At 80 she is quite active, going to daily Mass and Communion in the church a mile away from her home, visiting friends and even going to the seaside. Mr. Tim Mannix, the Archbishop's brother, and Mrs. Wallis, his sister, are also referred to by the correspondent in complimentary terms.

Investigation impossible. The answer to that is that while charges, like these are allowed to be made and to obtain currency without any impartial attempt to clear them up, the state of the country is never likely to improve.

If Gen. Crozier's charges are false, to leave them unanswered is not merely to inflict a cruel wrong on a great number of innocent individuals, but to weaken fatally the credit for ordinary justice, honesty, and humanity of the whole British administration in Ireland.

This indictment is far more than an Irish question. The point which it raises would have been just as essential if the scene had been laid in some remote Crown Colony or some distant Protectorate.

Mr. J. P. O'Connor, in a recent speech in the House of Commons, said that the Commons is a body of men who are not only brave but also intelligent. LIMERICK COURT-MARTIAL

KILLONAN INCIDENTS.

False Name Charges.

At a Field General Court-martial held in the New Barracks, Limerick, on Wednesday Michael Hennessy, Ballybricken, was charged (1) with having arms, namely, a rifle not under effective military control; (2) with giving a false name to a police sergeant. The accused pleaded not guilty to the first charge, but admitted the second.

The Prosecutor said the facts of the case were that on the morning of the 28th April Crown forces searched the house of Mrs. Mary Hennessy, Killonan, where the accused was found in bed. There was no other man in the house at the time. When the accused was found in bed, there was no other man in the house at the time. When the accused was found in bed, there was no other man in the house at the time.

The accused was questioned as to his name. He said it was Michael McDonald, a labourer and was in the employment of Mrs. Hennessy for two or three years. While the accused was being questioned a sergeant brought in a rifle which he got among hay outside. The accused denied any knowledge of it.

A police officer was examined, and stated that on the morning in question he was in charge of the party of police who searched the house; witness found the accused in bed in a room, and asked him his name, to which he replied Michael McDonald; during the time he was questioning the accused a sergeant brought in a rifle (produced); witness questioned Hennessy about it; he denied all knowledge of it, and witness took him into custody; four days afterwards he admitted his name was Michael Hennessy, from Ballybricken; there were three or four women in the house besides the accused.

Prosecutor—Was he asked several times if his name was Michael McDonald? Witness—Before he was identified by a policeman he admitted his name was Michael Hennessy.

It was stated by a police witness that he was a member of the search party, and in a pile of hay found a rifle.

Another police witness said the accused used to be at Ballybricken, some six or eight miles from where he was arrested; last August he lived there, and the house was subsequently destroyed.

President—Do you wish to make any statement? Accused—I do not know anything about the rifle, as I never saw it until the police officer produced it. The people of the house were kind to me since my house was burned, and I slept there.

The accused was found not guilty on the first charge.

Morean Portley was also charged with giving a false name to a police sergeant when found in the house of Mrs. Margaret Hennessy, Killonan, on the 28th April. Accused pleaded guilty, but declined to recognise the court. Decisions will be promulgated.

SHANNON TOLLS.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Department's Appeal.

With regard to the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in the county of New Ross, restrictions covering an area of 15 miles radius from New Ross with the Suir as a southern boundary are now in force. The Department desire to recall to farmers, dealers and all concerned with the livestock of the district that the voluntary co-operation of the people in seeing that the restrictions are loyally adhered to is of the first importance in the efforts to contain and stamp out the outbreak. This co-operation was available in the case of the outbreak at Arklow in January, and the result was the disease was not allowed to spread from the infected farms and was eliminated from the district in the minimum time. The origin of the present outbreak is as yet unknown; but owing to the traffic between the two islands there is a constant inter-influence from the danger of infection, and extreme vigilance alone is the guarantee of protection. A satisfactory feature of the present case is the prompt manner in which it was reported by the owners of the cattle concerned, a course which they took even before the symptoms had developed so far as to be ascertainable as a case of foot-and-mouth disease. This course permitted isolation from the earliest moment, thus giving the best opportunity for guarding against its spreading. The example of these owners is to be commended to all others, who should examine their livestock daily and report at once to the nearest local veterinary authority if they notice anything that seems in the slightest degree suspicious. The farmers' unions, co-operative cattle trade associations, co-operative societies and other organisations of the farmers and the trade have been asked to give their powerful influence to help previously done with such good effect.

The Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland issues the following:—In connection with recent investigations consequent upon the appearance of foot and mouth disease among Irish cattle in Great Britain, considerable difficulties have been experienced in tracing the history of these animals back to the farms; and in a number of instances it was found that the buyers of certain cattle were unable to state the names and addresses of the persons from whom they purchased certain animals, as at the time of purchase no record of the transaction in this respect had been kept. In order that the dislocation of the export livestock trade may, as far as possible, be minimised, it is essential that shippers and owners of livestock should be in a position to inform the Department of the names and addresses of the persons from whom cattle have been purchased. The Department, therefore, suggest that every person purchasing animals should note, at the time of purchase, the name and address of the vendor, together with a brief description of the animals, and, subsequently, if the animals are re-sold or consigned to Great Britain for sale, the name and address of the new purchaser or consignee, as the case may be, should be recorded.

DUBLIN CUSTOM HOUSE

BURNED DOWN.

ROOMS SPRINKLED WITH PETROL.

Many Casualties.

A large force of armed men raided the Custom House, Dublin, at 1 p.m. on Wednesday, held up the staff, and set fire to the fine building, which was completely destroyed. On Thursday morning the flames could still be seen issuing from the structure.

The many Government departments in the building included the offices of the L.G.B., Customs and Excise, Inland Revenue, and Old Age Pensions, and their valuable documents have been reduced to ashes.

Sections of the Fire Brigade were held up by armed men for a considerable time after the fire was started. They subsequently endeavoured to cope with the flames, which, however, made rapid headway from various parts of the building.

An amazing feature of the raid was the arrival of the bulk of the raiders in two motor lorries, with boxes containing tins of petrol, cotton waste, and mattresses.

According to a military official report the Crown forces were attacked on their way to the fire, and four cadets were wounded, and at the Custom House the raiders and Crown forces exchanged shots.

With the destruction of the Custom House two of the finest buildings in Dublin have now, unfortunately, disappeared, the G.P.O. having been destroyed in the 1916 insurrection.

When the fire at the Custom House started, Auxiliary R.I.C. arriving in the vicinity in lorries were attacked with bombs and fired at.

In a short time there were terrific firing in the neighbourhood, a machine gun being brought into action.

A General Headquarters report says that of Crown forces on their way to the fire four cadets were wounded; that the raiders fired from the Custom House, and the fire was returned by the Crown forces; that of those who left the building were 100 whose presence there could not be satisfactorily explained. The report estimates the casualties at 7 civilians killed, 10 wounded and 111 arrested.

An Irish Official (London) report says that many raiders surrendered, and of those who attempted to leave at first one was killed and the others wounded, and that of seven others who tried to escape six were killed or wounded. It suggests that some of the raiders were burnt to death before the Crown forces entered.

Of the killed and wounded only the following have been identified:—Dead.—Mahon J
