The house of Bidderman and Co of Paris, after an ineffectual endeavour to resume its payments, has finally and notoriously stopped, and at a meeting of the creditors, it was explained that the Paris Bank had refused to discount their bills, and that thus circumstanced they could not resist the pressure. An arrangement was immediately entered into with the claimants, under which they are to be paid in full by instalments at 6, 12, and 18th months.

Another house of great consequence at Paris, has been under the necessity of suspending its payments, but it would neither be just or prudent at present to mention the firm.

A great number of bills have been drawn on Paris from this city in consequence of the active trade within these last two months, and on account of the calamitous events to which we have just referred; we fear these bills to a considerable amount will be returned undischarged.

The London papers of Sunday, have arrived but do not contain any intelligence in addition to the above.

It is now confidentially ascertained that no change will for the present be made in the Administration, particularly with respect to those at the head of affairs.

Lord Moira, it is confidently stated, will succeed to the Government of Ireland, in the event of a change of Ministers; and it is added, that he is to be authorised to declare to the Catholics of that country, the intention of the Prince to grant them full emancipation the moment he may be enabled to do so without violence to the delicacy and to the respect he owes even to the prejudices which may have operated to maintain the present system of impolitic exclusion. — Observer.

Yesterday, a most glaring fraud was detected at our Butter Weigh-house, by one of the Inspectors; — in the act of boring two different casks of butter, to ascertain their quality, the Inspector observed that the borer did not go so deep in the casks as it should, and immediately caused them to be stripped, when there appeared in the bottom of each, a false bottom of very thick weighty timber. The casks were carried before the Worshipful Mayor, who ordered the butter to be sent to the House of Industry, and declared if the owner could be had he would lodge him in jail.

Friday the Lord Chancellor and Mr. Perceval went again to Windsor, and had a regular examination of the physicians, as to the state of the King's health, and the likelihood of his speedy recovery, previous to the passing of the commission. Rumour says, that the physicians all concurred in their expectations of the King's recovery; but they thought it improbable that he could be capable of returning to business for a considerable time to come. They did not perfectly agree as to the precise time; but the result of their report we understand to be, that the Regency must take place. — Star.

A few days ago, his Majesty, addressing one of his attendant physicians, told him, that the Duchess of Brunswick had desired him, about six months ago, whenever he was indisposed, to take the advice of that physician, as she had a higher opinion of him than of any other whom she had seen since her return to this country. The physician, whose name it might appear invidious to mention, considering that such an instance of recollection would be a striking test of his Majesty's convalescence, took an early opportunity of waiting upon the Duchess of Brunswick, and had the pleasure to receive from her Royal Highness a full confirmation of what his Majesty had related. — Ibid.
