VOUS DEBILITY.

THE following Case is submitted for consideration elucidating the inestimable benefits arising from the use of Dr. Lamert's justly celebrated medicine.

TO DR. LAMERT.

SIR—It has been my intention for a length of time to address you on a subject closely connected with your celebrity; but I must confess that a feeling of delicacy has hitherto withheld me, for we are all unwilling to expose our own errors. My cure, however, has been so singularly complete, that I felt it would be an act of gross injustice to your character and skill, were I longer to withhold, a case as remarkable, perhaps, as any on record. Born in a polished circle of society, I was early sent to a respectable public seminary, where, for some years, all went on with prosperity and happiness.—Unfortunately, however, a habit was sent abroad amongst us, the pleasing allurements of which I was, with many others, unable to resist—possessed of an unusual warmth of temperament, I was for some time unsatiable—but why should I trouble you with particulars?—years rolled away, and left me an altered man! infirmities gathered around me, and at the age of twenty years, I was actually dying of decay—a gradual but certain decay. I wondered at the cause of all this premature debility, nor did the truth ever flash across my mind, until an accidental perusal of a British newspaper, where I saw an address of yours, which made me fully sensible of my miserable situation. Do you imagine, Sir, that I had no advice; I had the best; but I confess it, I gave no hints, and my medical adviser never saw the true nature of my malady. Shame held my tongue, and inexperience clouded my faculties. The horror of my situation increased every renewed day, with the cause of misery, self entailed, gnawing at my heart, in my waking moments—in seeking rest, I only sought a change of torments, the long hours of darkness seemed awful—those of sleep filled me with raking horrors, indescribable—I longed for day—with day I was wearied—and I beheld the approach of night with abhorrence. Under these circumstances of unqualified affliction, I journeyed upwards of seventy miles to have a consultation with you, as soon as you made your wished-for visit to the North. I need not say how soon you were aware of my appalling situation, or the anxiety you manifested in accomplishing my relief, (a circumstance which will ever have a grateful claim on my memory,) or of the confidence with which you spoke of my recovery. You directed me to that invaluable Restorative, the “CORDIAL BALM OF LIFE,” and by perseverance in following the directions, and with the blessing of Providence, a wonderful cure has been completely effected, and I am now, in every sense of the word, become a new man! I transmit this account for your honour, and for the benefit of others, who may unfortunately be placed in a situation of similar wretchedness; you may omit my residence, but, if asked or, you are at liberty to give it. Remaining, Sir, with every sentiment of regard, yours truly,
FREDERICK STEVENSON BARCKLAY.
 To Dr. Lamert, 10, Church-street, Spitalfields, London.
 Dr. LAMERT, in consequence of his extensive correspondence, respectfully acquaints those persons desirous of consulting him, that the usual inclosure of £1, addressed “Money Letter, post-paid,” to his Old Medical Establishment, 10, Church-street, Spitalfields, London, is expected, which will at all times meet due attention, and Medicine carefully forwarded to the most distant part of the Kingdom of Great Britain, with an explicit Reply to all communications forwarded as above, otherwise they will not be received.
