

DEATHS.

Monday last, at his house, in George's-st., Samuel Caswell, Esq. of Blackwater, after an illness of some weeks. In commercial transactions, both extensive and prosperous, which extended over a considerable period, Mr. Caswell uniformly sustained the highest character as a man of business, for integrity and punctuality; while his private life was marked by strict attention to all the social and religious duties. The benevolence of his nature, and unassuming deportment in every station, won the respect and esteem of all classes of his fellow-citizens. In the domestic circle, his family and friends will long regret the loss of a fond parent and sincere friend. He departed this life in the well-grounded hope of a happy resurrection to his CREATOR and SAVIOUR. His remains left this day for interment at Clonlara Church, preceded by a numerous body of his tenantry, two and two, in white hat bands, accompanied by a most respectable cortege of gentry and personal friends, followed by over thirty private equipages.

Saturday night last, at the house of Surgeon O'Shaughnessy, in George's-street, after a very few days illness, of spinal paralysis, aged 45 years, the Rev. Patrick D'Arcy, P.P. of Mungret, formerly Administrator of St. Michael's parish, and grand nephew of the late Rt. Rev. Dr. O'Shaughnessy, R. C. Bishop of Killaloe. It is the first characteristic of the priestly office to illustrate by precept, and to enforce by example, the Christian virtues of faith, hope, and charity; without which triune beatitude, religion would be a libel on the gospel of divine truth. The moral influence of civilised life never can impress the right obligations of duty from man to man, unless consecrated by the regenerating efficacy of those three celestial attributes, in mercy sent from heaven, to enlighten and reform erring mortals. "Glory to God, peace and good will on earth," is the text most befitting the faithful minister of God, and it was this theme which endeared the Rev. Patrick D'Arcy to the hearts of his congregation, while caring in sickness and health, in pain and affliction, for their temporal and eternal welfare. His prepossessing appearance and address, almost without an effort, conciliated the indifferent; while his mild, friendly exhortations, reclaimed the vicious, when ecclesiastical censure had failed. Every word and act of his comparatively short though well-spent life, harmonised with a singular gentleness of manners and amiability of temper; and all these excellent qualities were entirely devoted to the service of God, whom he loved in his commandments. The mortal remains of the Rev. Mr. D'Arcy were yesterday conveyed for interment to Mungret chapel, by the largest and most respectable concourse ever seen attending a funeral from Limerick. The Rt. Rev. Dr. Ryan and fifty of his Clergy attended.
