

by performing his duty, made his former friends not only his enemies, but his malignant enemies. He was satisfied in the discharge of his duty to his country, and in his having supported its constitution, and warned the people against the example of France, which was destructive of liberty, subversive of property, and ruinous to that and other countries.

He remarked upon the discipline and good order of the Rt. hon. gentleman's troops, but did not think it friendly, though it was a fine display of generalship to come down upon him with his heavy artillery, after he had been greatly exhausted by the harassing of the light corps. He again asserted the constitution to be in danger, and called for timely checks. When clubs of men are suffered to meet and correspond with France; when regular anniversaries are permitted to commemorate such events as have happened in France, then the country is in danger; when such plots and conspiracies are going on; when seditious and rebellious sermons are delivered from pulpits; when the King's right to the throne is openly disputed; and when a bank of sedition is established in the heart of the country, the house ought to take fire and destroy them.

Urging this point at some length, he again noticed the French constitution, which he said was the worst that could have been formed by the united folly and wickedness of man; it was a baseless fabric; it was a constitution supported by the worst and most dreadful tyranny; every step taken by them to liberty, sacrificed order, and every step to order sacrificed liberty and property. He concluded by moving an amendment to the motion, to omit the words "tending to shew that examples from the said constitution of France, to prove the same inefficient for every good purpose, and tending to anarchy, confusion, and the destruction of liberty and property, is applicable to the question before the committee."

Mr. Fox rose: having laboured for some time in an agony of perturbation, he at length burst into tears, which arrested the feelings and sympathy, in a particular and affecting manner, of the whole house; when the first emotions subsided, he attempted to speak, but was a second time prevented by an effusion of tears, which deeply affected all present, however, with some difficulty he proceeded to declare, that notwithstanding what had passed that day, he could not give up a friendship that had existed for twenty-five years. He replied to many parts of Mr. Burke's speech, and concluded by declaring, that unless their mutual friends exerted themselves to him and the right hon. gentleman their former friendship, he should not think they acted affectionately towards him.

Mr. BURKE, Mr. PITT, and Mr. Fox, again spoke.

The question order was withdrawn, and the debate on the clauses was adjourned to Wednesday next.

At half past twelve the house adjourned.

DUBLIN, May 14.

An action of CRIM CON is commenced against a once celebrated young blood, who is now a Lord by COURTESY.

Monday last, in the English House of Lords, the Roman Catholic Bill, on the motion of Lord Rawdon, was ordered to be considered on the 23d instant. And,

Lord Fitzwilliam moved, "That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, praying that he might be graciously pleased to give directions, that the commerce which has so long subsisted between this country and Russia, might not, through any political motives of Ministry, be hazarded or impeded by entering rashly into war."

LIMERICK.

The last Packet mentions the return of Mr. Flint the messenger, from Petersburg, it is understood that he has brought no favorable preface of pacific resolutions; but on the contrary, that the Empress remains inexorable, and determined to abide by the stipulations which she has already publicly announced to the court of Denmark.—It also appears by the complexion of the present dispatches, that the British court will not be permitted, as a Mediator, to dictate terms of a peace between the Empress and the Porte.

On the 12th inst. Thomas Egan, who served his apprenticeship to John Miller, of the city of Dublin, Esq; was admitted an Attorney of his Majesty's Court of Common Pleas in Ireland.

MARRIED.] Thursday morning, at Nanteenan Church, William Lyfaght, of Mountnorth, in the county of Cork, Counsellor at Law, to Miss Royle, only daughter to Thomas Royle, of Ballinvirig, in this county, Esq. A young Lady whose mental accomplishments must insure permanent felicity in the connubial state.—On Thursday, last, at Clonmel, Mr. James Moore, to Miss Susanna Grubb, both of the Society of Quakers.—Yesterday, Mr. Felix O'Neil, Master of the brig Flora of this port, to Miss John's daughter of Mr. Samuel Johns's, silversmith.

THE COMMITTEE for managing the Fund, for supplying the Market with Provisions, finding that the Backwardness of the Country People in general, in bringing Potatoes to Town, and the Forwardness of those in the City and Neighbourhood, in obstructing such as have lately attempted bringing them, must make the Supply of that Article very uncertain, have determined to withdraw the Bounty on Potatoes, to which of course, no Price is now affixed—and on consulting the Gentlemen, concerned in the Corn and Meal Business, they have made a Contract for Meal until the 1st Day of October next, to be retailed to the poor Inhabitants of the City and Suburbs only; and Orders are given to prevent others from being supplied in that way.
