No account has yet arrived of the appointment of a Lord Chancellor. The contest is universally allowed to be between the two Attorney Generals of the different kingdoms; nor is there a shadow of doubt where the pre-ponderancy of legal knowledge and ability lies. The Attorney General of Ireland is confessed on all hands, let party prejudice be ever so strong, to be among the first in the first class in these respects—whilst his English competitor, possessing a large portion of Cayenne in his constitution, has never been regarded as one of the luminaries of the law, but twinkles in a very inferior sphere of estimation, however high in rank. It will surely then be too humiliating to this country to give such a man the preference, merely because he was not born in Ireland;—if such is Mr. Pitt's mighty will, we may expect our next succeeding Chancellor from Nova Scotia or Botany Bay.

Tuesday as the troops were passing his Excellency, at the review in the Park, his horse took fright as the Ensigns belonging to one of the regiments were lowering their colours, and threw his Excellency, but fortunately received no hurt.

It is with great concern we are this day informed, that an amiable and once popular gentleman, who is Knight of the Shire of a Western County; has had the misfortune for some days past to suffer such a derangement of his mental faculties, as to give his friends the greatest affliction; especially, as there yet appears no symptom of recovery.

The recent commotions in the county of Armagh are of such a nature as to justify the most serious alarms. No sufficient cause appears to have originated them, which but the more increases speculation; and the mysterious secrecy observed with respect to them is unaccountable. Government wishes to suppress all mention of their existence; but they can be neither denied nor palliated; and the public have a right to have them minutely investigated.

On Wednesday last a gentleman was brought a prisoner to the Castle, from the county of Fermanagh, as a state criminal. Some charges of a treasonable nature, it is said, have been exhibited against him, particularly that of promoting the excesses committed by the insurgents who distinguish themselves by the appellation of "Break-of-day Boys, Right Boys, &c." A Privy Council supposed to be on this business met at the Castle on Thursday evening.

This was a race of much expectation, yet an easy one—Scourge rather the favourite, who appeared to be in great spirits and good condition—after the first heat the betts ran, that Fairy Queen (after one hundred yards) should never give Hippomenes a lead, which were all won by the mare.—The turf was this day in delicate order.

We think it necessary to caution Irishmen how they are inveigled or trepanned to transport themselves to the inhospitable wilds of North America. A few weeks before Christmas an unprincipled American, master of a ship, whose name our correspondent does not mention, took in a number of passengers at Dublin for Charlestown, S. Carolina; when they were a week at sea, although he had only ballast, he put them to a short allowance of water, in order to make the voyage more disgusting, and instead of sailing for Charlestown, landed them at his own port in North Carolina, which is represented as a poor wretched place, and from whence they had 400 miles to travel. Such of the passengers as had money went to law with the master, but a verdict was given against them because the vessel sprung one of her masts, which is asserted to have been a contrivance of the master's.—An industrious man will always get bread at home, without seeking it at a distance of 3000 miles, where want and misery and sickness is often his lot.
