Orders are sent from the Admiralty Office to the commanders of his Majesty's cruizers in the Channel, not to suffer any ships cruising under the flag of any foreign power, to exercise a right of examining vessels on the Narrow Seas, on any pretence whatever.

The Swedish fleet, on the 16th of July, after having formed the line, and stretched directly across the Baltic, from Rugenwald to Oeland, captured two Russian cutters, and several other vessels: in all amounting to seven ships. They were laden with provisions.

His Majesty, accompanied by his favourite triumvirate of Lords, and attended by two Equerries, made, on Wednesday, an excursion on horseback to Dorchester, and returned to an early dinner.

After dinner he walked about the town, and conversed with infinite affability with many of the inhabitants.

Dr. Glafs, who preached before their Majesties on Sunday se'night, at Weymouth, observing the Dragoons at Church without books, presented the whole detachment last Sunday with a Common Prayer-book each.

The Vestal frigate, Capt. Sir Richard Strahan, is under sailing orders for Bengal, and expected to be shortly dispatched. No other vessel will sail for India till the regular ships of the season.

Lord Malmebury's plate, baggage, &c. are arrived in a brig from Holland. It is said to be a cabinet of curiosities; and it is somewhat remarkable, that one table-cloth alone is valued at the sum of two hundred pounds! It is calculated to cover a table for sixty persons, and is esteemed a very singular curiosity of the kind.

The King has granted to Henry Fanshawe, Esq; late Colonel of his Majesty's 83d regiment of foot, now Colonel of the regiment of Elzkooy, in the service of her Imperial Majesty of all the Russias, his royal licence and authority to accept and wear (in his own country) the cross of the military order of St. George, conferred on him by her said Imperial Majesty, in testimony of her most gracious approbation of his conduct.

Lady Charleville died, on Thursday last, in a very advanced period of life, at her house in Isleworth.

Lady Charleville, who is just dead, married the last time, contrary to the wishes of all her friends. Her Ladyship acquainted no person but her intimate friend, the late Lady York. Although it was not a run-away match, it was a private and stolen one as it were. Sir John Coghill, then Mr Coghill, was, as well as her Ladyship, at Mr. Foote's Theatre; when, after the play, a post-chaise and four being ready, they decamped, and were next day married.

Her Ladyship was first married to Lord Viscount Tullamore, afterwards Earl of Charleville, who was Muster Master General of the forces on the Irish establishment. Her ladyship's next, and last matrimonial engagement, was with Mr. Coghill, as abovementioned.

There is no surviving issue. Mr. BURY, of Tullamore, in Ireland, as the next heir of the Charleville family, comes, consequently, into possession of the large jointure so long held by her Ladyship, which will form no inconsiderable addition to the already princely fortune of that deserving and humane young gentleman.

—He is now in his twenty-fifth year, and is just returned from his travels, and on the ensuing election in competition with Mr. Denis Bowes Daly, and Sir William Parsons, of Birr, Bart. stands candidate for the King's County. Of his success there cannot be a doubt.—If a numerous tenantry, powerful friends, 20,000l. a year, and a most excellent character can effect any thing, Mr. Bury has them all; with different kinds of grain, the colliers and miners to the amount of 200 men, assembled, and next morning proceeded to Bangor, where they seized the grain, which they sent in Waggon, to Wrexham. They set fire to one of the boats, and to prevent the other sharing the same fate the proprietors were obliged to present them with five guineas. Several waggon loads of corn and flour were likewise secured and brought from different places to Wrexham, where it all remains, and it is supposed will be sold the next market day at a fair price.

Every post bringing from different parts of the kingdom accounts of a considerable advance on corn and grain, and the weather continuing showery, our millers were induced to bid 69s. per quarter for the wheat they offered only 67s. for on Wednesday.

Our stable-keepers, alarmed by the general complaints against the hay season, and the great quantity of oats exported, enhanced the value of that article one shilling per quarter.

With the most heartfelt regret we announce to the public the death of Sir Watkins William Wynne, Bart. His dissolution took place on Wednesday night, between ten and eleven o'clock.

DUBLIN, AUGUST 4.

There was a mistake in mentioning that Lord Massarene had been confined in the Chatelet for 30 years as 21 years imprisonment is deemed by the laws of France, a sufficient atonement for the discharge of any debt. His Lordship was arrested in the year 1769, when on his travels, and in about another year he would have been liberated of course, if the commotions had not happened in Paris. He is now about 43 years of age, and will shortly settle in Ireland, his native country, rendered more dear by his long absence.

Forde, the wretched delinquent who on Saturday was executed at the New Prison for robbery, exhibited a shocking spirit of obstinacy and resistance previous to his death. Force became indispensably necessary to make him yield to his sentence, after having wickedly attempted the life not only of the executioner, but even that of the clergyman, who attended him. At the time the fatal board was removed from his support, he lay prostrate, and in that situation was launched head foremost into eternity.

God send that Mr. Herschell's prediction may not be verified, "that it will rain more or less every day 'till next October."—It has held good every day in the month of July.

DIED. Last Friday, at Stackallan, county Meath, Richard Hamilton, Lord Vis. Boyne; he is succeeded in title and estate by his eldest son, Gustavus Hamilton, now Lord Viscount Boyne.—In Waterford, the wife of Mr. Thomas Sargent, merchant.—In Cork, Mr. Sharp, earthenware-seller.

Waterford, Aug. 4. Yesterday the Right Hon. Lord Chief Baron Yelverton, and the Hon. Justice Henn, Judges of Assize for the Munster circuit, arrived here and opened the courts.

At an adjournment of the quarter sessions held on Friday, five persons for different assaults were sentenced to be fined and confined.

On Sunday morning died in Ross, most deservedly regretted, Joseph Boyd, Esq.

Arrived on Saturday the Ponsonby with the mail, Lord De-la Poer and his three brothers, (sons to the Right Hon. the Earl of Tyrone) Mr. Kitner, Wandesford and James Butler, Esqrs. of Kilkenny, Laurence Parsons, Esq; son to Sir William Parsons, the Right Hon. Henry Flood, and Mr. William Ferrar, of Limerick.

the unbounded benefits of trade. Therefore tillage of corn cannot be too much pursued; for we find that the export of potatoes can be of no avail, as even the starving French will not consume that bulbous root, but corn has been the treasure and support of all nations in all ages; and it is well known, if the industry of the kingdom were to be properly exerted, we could supply the great demand of foreign countries with the inestimable commodity.

Not long since, we were obliged to remit annually to other countries upwards of 200,000l. to supply our internal consumption of corn; but we owe to the Dublin Society, and that great character who animated its proceedings, and raised the linen manufacture to its present enviable height—we owe to his Excellency John Foster, the wonderful increase of our tillage. Heroes have had statues erected to them—for their dexterity in the destruction of mankind—human gratitude must therefore pause to know what regard is adequate to the merits of the individual, the labour of whose life has been directed to serve mankind.

HIBERNICUS.

The Revd. John Wardlaw, Rector of the Parish of Killeely, hereby acknowledges the receipt of Twenty Guineas, from the Rt. Hon. Lord Cosyngham, towards new Roofing the Church at Meelick; the said Lord also clothed twenty poor Women, last winter, in the same Parish.

Tuesday morning a duel was fought by two Officers, in the Kings-Island, when after an exchange of shots, their seconds interfered, and the dispute happily terminated.

This morning there was as heavy showers of Rain, as fell during last winter.

MARRIED. A few days ago, at Hymenstown, Co. Tipperary, William Butler, Esq; of Inch, in said Co. to the Hon. Miss Maffly, daughter of the late Right Hon. Lord Maffly.
