...mands of his Majesty, who is Captain-General

...ges, to which only this ancient body of volunteers
...titled, appointed yesterday for the above purpose, ...gnified his intention of inspecting the regiment at ...me time. At half-past three o'clock his Royal
...ness arrived on the ground, but in consequence of ...licate state of his health, and the wet condition of ...ss, his Royal Highness immediately proceeded
...Armoury-house, and was followed by the whole
...officers and members of the corps, when his ...Highness, after a suitable address, presented Col.
...with the charter of the Company. Covers were laid
...0 gentlemen in the grand room of the Armoury-
...and at five o'clock the Company sat down to an ...entertainment, which had been prepared for the
...on.

...sion the best mode of rationally educating, employ...ing and uniting the people, in order to prevent the ...city for the distressing occurrences which have lately
...place in France, as well as to give a new and bene-

...is reducing the greater part of the population to ...poverty and misery." About two o'clock Mr. Owen, of ...Cork, was called to the chair, and was loudly applaud-

...subject of the meeting, drawn up by Mr. Owen, embrac-

...Understand that his Majesty, in addition to the late
...valuable gift to the Zoological Society of the Menagerie

...St. James's Road, on Reform, to the working classes.—
...In conclusion of the Lecture, Mr. Cobbett said there ...and would be happy to oblige them. A French

...man then rose and sang the hymn, Mr. Cobbett

...The difficulties in the way of the entrance into the ...country from Carlton Palace have been at length sur...mounted, through the determined perseverance of the ...Commissioner of Woods and Forests, and on ...Monday the workmen commenced their labours. The ...method which has been adopted is very simple, but quite ...convenient to the public convenience and comfort. We

...The military, composed of Infantry and cavalry,

...was attacked by the people, and completely routed.—
...The prisoners who were rescued were charged with a riot
...at the door, about the right of boundary on the common.
...Several of the military were severely injured.
...An inquest was held at the Phoenix Inn, Morpeth, on ...Monday, on view of the body of an Italian, named
...Elephant, who was one of the attendants on the ...celebrated elephant which lately performed at the Adelphi.
...Inferred from the evidence, that the man had stabbed
...the elephant in the trunk with a pitchfork about two years ...before he died in a state of intoxication, and that, on the ...evening previous to the inquest, the animal
...took hold of him with her trunk, and did him so much
...injury that he died the succeeding day. Verdict—Died
...of wounds and bruises received from the trunk of an

...your persuasive example will retain its influence amongst ...us, long after your removal to that more extended field of ...useful and honorable labour, where the voice of duty now
...demands your exertions, and where, we doubt not, the ...practical illustration of those principles, of which you ...have been uniformly the powerful and eloquent advocate,
...will speedily obtain, in a wider sphere, the same moral
...influence which you have acquired in this City.

The interest you take in the general welfare of this country, and your attachment to the inhabitants of Cork in particular, are truly gratifying, and induce us to hope, that we shall occasionally be favoured with your valuable assistance in the further progress of those useful and benevolent objects, which your labours have hitherto so signally promoted.

Be assured our unfeigned regret at this painful separation, is only equalled by the sincerity of our ardent wishes, for your future prosperity and happiness.

Signed on behalf of a meeting of the Citizens of Cork, held at the Council Chamber, on Monday the 6th of September, 1830.

GEORGE KNAPP, Mayor and Chairman.
Cork, Sept. 7th, 1830.

Gentlemen—The Address with which you have so kindly honoured me, I regard as a tribute offered to the general principles which have formed the basis of my conduct, while resident amongst you, and the feelings of friendship, expressed in the Address towards myself, I shall remember through life, as an incentive to the exercise of the same integrity of motive and purpose, which I have humbly endeavoured to preserve, in my intercourse with my fellow citizens of Cork.

Gentlemen—In the management of Public Institutions, I have met you in the spirit of unity, without concealing my own principles—and I have been received with a cordiality which I shall never forget; some narrow minds have assumed, that variety of opinion is incompatible with combined operations in any good work, but I have been taught by my intercourse with you, how far such a sentiment is from being a just transcript of the realities of life, and I rejoice in the opportunity your kindness has given me, of bearing my humble testimony to the liberality of Irish feeling and Irish good sense, before I leave a land, with which I shall always associate some of the dearest recollections of my life, and which I shall be glad to revisit, as often as circumstances will permit.

Gentlemen—Accept my best thanks for all the kindness you have borne me, and for the very flattering public expression of it contained in your Address, and believe me when I say, that your interests, and those of your City, shall always occupy a high place in my affections.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obedient servant,
JOHN BURNET.

County Kerry, which is usually grown where

There is now growing in the lawn at Youghal, near Middleton, the seat of Cosenne Foulke, the handsomest Beech tree in Ireland; its undergrowth close to the ground, form a circle of two eighty seven feet. What makes this tree so valuable is, that the trunk of it had been over two as a chopping block for cutting timber on for which it had been stuck in the ground for a for cattle, when it struck out the above branch.

The arrival of a most elegant stock of
