

DEMAS ESTRANGEROS. Your Excellency not to learn that the words are most expressive in the Spanish idiom; but, we were scarcely in possession of our new lodging, and our names entered on the jail-book, when a sentiment, perhaps, of repentance in the magistrate's breast, pleaded our enlargement, which he gave immediate orders for: Nothing but dread of a pestilence from so infernal a lodging, could have prevailed on us to comply with this mandate, until we should previously have claimed your Excellency's interference and that protection due to us as British subjects, established here on the good faith of treaties, and which protection we still think we stand in need of.

Your Excellency will pardon our freedom, if we make bold to observe, that so unprovoked an attack on the liberty of Englishmen (rather Irishmen) demands such national and individual satisfaction, as we hope your Excellency will obtain.

We have the honour to be,
Your Excellency's, &c.

O'CALLAGHAN, who died a few days ago, at Spancelhill in the co. Clare, in consequence of a wound he received in a duel, was the lineal descendant of Callaghan Cashell, a heroic Irish hero, who, with his brother, Keenedy, vanquished the Danes in a bloody sea fight, on the coast of this kingdom, in the tenth century. To most refined manners and accomplishments he united the most exalted ideas of honour and probity, which will render his memory dear to all those who had the honor of his acquaintance; and what adds to the universal sorrow, excited by his premature and untimely death, is the extinction of the male line of this illustrious family, as he died without issue.

On Friday 9th inst. at the assizes of Mullingar, James Givan, alias Suppie, alias the Horse, Francis Gan, Christopher Thompson, William Lawler, and Garret Ryan, were all capitally convicted of robbery, and are to be hanged in a few days.

Friday last, the remains of the late George Quin, Esq; attended by a number of gentlemen in carriages, his numerous tenantry, and others, proceeded from Quilshora to Adare, where his corpse was interred in the family vault.

Last Saturday, George Lancy for wilful and corrupt perjury, stood in the pillory for one hour, at the Market-house, with a label on his breast and back, expressive of his crime.

DIED.] Last Wednesday, Mount-Harmon, King's County, the Rt. Hon. John Armstrong, Member of Parliament for the borough of Kilmallock, in this county, and one of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council. This deplorable event becomes an irreparable loss to his disconsolate widow, family, a numerous tenantry, and respectable acquaintance, who with heartfelt sorrow, now sincerely regret his dissolution.
