

is on a visit with General Sir Edw. D'Almeida, Commander of the Forces, in Dublin.

Lieut. Turner, late from Spain, is to join the troop of Royal Horse Artillery in this garrison.

The vacant troop of the 11th Hussars will not go in the Regiment, as the next officer for purchase, Lieut. Forrest, is obnoxious to his commanding officer, Lord Cardigan.

On Tuesday Major-Gen. Sir W. P. Carrol inspected the Depot of the 5th Fusileers, under command of Major Johnson, at Castlebar, in heavy marching order, and the next day in light order, when the Major-Gen. was pleased to express himself highly pleased with every thing connected with that Depot, particularly their light drill. After the inspection, Lord and Lady Lucan, the Major-Gen. and a large party, honoured the officers with their company at lunch, in the mess room.

Major-General Sir William Parker Carroll, K.C.B. inspected the Depot 67th Regt. under command of Major Orange, on Thursday, at Galway. After having examined the interior economy, and visited the school, which elicited his marked approbation, he inspected the Depot in review order, and after witnessing a variety of movements, the Major-Gen. was pleased to compliment the officers and men for the very creditable manner in which the Depot went through the evolutions, and for their appearance under arms. The General honoured the mess with his presence afterwards, and proceeded next day for Loughcooter Castle, the seat of Lord Viscount Gort, en route to Clare Castle to inspect the 36th Depot yesterday.

Yesterday, a party of the 59th, from Tipperary, brought in a deserter from the 97th Regiment, named James Keating.

Two deserters are taken up by the Borrisoleigh Police—Simmons, 19th, and Lyons, 38th; the latter branded with the letter D.
