BIRMINGHAM'S LECTURES ON PALESTINE.— Courses continue to attract crowded and fashionable audiences each successive evening, at the Philosophy House, Upper Glentworth-street. The course formed on the occasion of the introductory has been more than realized. The historical interest excited at the commencement, unabated, which is to be attributed as much to Birmingham's chaste and nervous elegance of as to the importance and attractiveness of the subject itself. Our citizens have, although weary, devoured up his discourse." At the conclusion of each incident connected with this and hallowed associations, the anxiety to go farther in idea, through "Syria's sunny land," and over scenes rendered sacred by a long train of footsteps, grows still stronger. The fresh and spontaneous outpourings of his highly cultivated mind and transcripts of his own fertile thought—lend to the whole. In fine, "take them all the lectures on Palestine are calculated to be of great family of man, in every clime, and of irrefutable proofs that Truth is strange—
 Stranger than fiction.
