

amendments in the Coroners' Act are the attendance of Coroners at inquests matter of interest or obligation with them as soon as a Coroner's number of inquests under the present system, any excuse serves for non-attendance imperative on Coroners always to take the medical person who attended the deference to that of strange professional men possibly give satisfactory opinions. Under the Act it is quite common for Coroners to travel from great distances and take their evidence on the sole testimony on which judgments are properly to be founded.

Coroners, by receiving unnecessary evidence, increasing the amount of Grand Jury business, and the present Act, that any person who knows nothing of the case, and is unnecessary, is sworn by the Coroner, in opposition to the common sense of the people. An instance has occurred in which a deaf woman was received who never saw the deceased, nor examined her when dead. In this country was first to pay the surgeon's fees for the inquest, and again for attending at the inquest on either occasion was required.

Magistrates who hold inquests in the interest of the Coroner, to pay medical witnesses
