

DEATHS.

On the 27th instant, at his residence, 54, Upper Baggot-street, Dublin, deeply and deservedly regretted by his family and friends, Henry Bindon FitzGerald, Esq. aged 61 years, late of this City. His remains were this day interred in the family vault, at Croagh, in this County.

Suddenly, at his house, in Mallow-street, on Thursday evening, Joseph Reay, Esq. late Collector of Her Majesty's Customs at this port. His whole life was characterised by the strictest integrity, honor, and uprightness; and in every step of his professional career he secured the esteem of all who had intercourse with him. Indebted solely to his own merit for the respectable position which he attained, he retired from his official duties at an advanced age, bearing with him the unqualified approbation of the heads of his department and the profound respect of all who knew him. The merchants of this City will long remember the urbanity and candor of his manners in the transactions of business. His life was marked by the most sincere and unobtrusive piety—his walk in public and private was that of a devoted servant of God—his charity was unostentatious and more than a limited income could afford—mild and gentle in his manners, retiring and domestic in his habits—he was a man "in whom there was no guile."
