ACCIDENTS.

London correspondent writes of a painful case that has occurred in the West of England and accomplished by the healthy parents; on receiving the other day at the door a small dog. Out of charity they took the dog to the house and giving it food. To such a degree had the dog been reduced that the parents were keenly touched by the animal's self. The dog eventually refused to eat; the parents, in a moment of fortune attempting a humane course, turned savage; seized the dog by the neck, and inflicted a wound. The lady was found in the floor, and on a search to remove the cause of
